1. OVERVIEW

1.1 Purpose

Community-based health services provide the foundation for health care access and, consequently, better health outcomes for most Boston residents. Whether through our robust community health center network or the hundreds of community-based organizations providing dedicated services to thousands of Bostonians, these efforts help to improve the health and well-being of many of our residents. Through this Request for Information, we are seeking ideas about how to best improve the health of Hyde Park residents while utilizing an important City asset in the neighborhood. These ideas can range from satellite community health centers to additional health programming as long as the primary goal is to enhance access to services that improve the health and wellbeing of Hyde Park's residents.

The City has identified space in the Hyde Park Community Center as a location to be used to support and strengthen health services in the neighborhood. Situated in the heart of the neighborhood, this building has roughly 10,000 square feet available for build out. To support the conversion of this space to a center for health, the City has allocated up to $2 Million in its capital budget. This is a great opportunity to leverage the assets the City has available to make an impact on the health of this neighborhood.

Information collected through this RFI will inform a subsequent Request for Proposals (RFP). Through that RFP, the City will select a partner to support expanded health services in Hyde Park.

1.2 About Hyde Park

Hyde Park is a diverse, dynamic and growing neighborhood in Boston.

It is home to nearly 40,000 residents, 21 % of whom are 17 years old or younger and 21% of whom are 60 years old or older. Nearly one-in-three residents of Hyde Park were born outside of the United States. Nearly half of Hyde Park's residents are Black / African-American, with 26% Hispanic, 22% White, and 2% Asian-American.

While Boston is overwhelmingly a city of renters, Hyde Park is one of only two neighborhoods in Boston where a majority of housing units are owner-occupied. It's also the neighborhood with the most residents staying in the same house year after year. Household income and the employment rate in Hyde Park are on par with the citywide figures.

Hyde Park has a higher percentage of residents with health insurance than Boston as a whole. Meanwhile, it is one of three neighborhoods with a life expectancy below the rest of Boston, with a higher number of instances of hospitalization due to diabetes and injury than other neighborhoods.

At the onset of the COVID-19 pandemic, Hyde Park residents were disproportionately impacted by the virus and at some points led the city in the percentage of positive cases. Today, almost 70% of Hyde Park residents have received their first shot of the COVID-19 vaccine in the effort to mitigate the harms of COVID-19.

This pandemic highlighted the importance of community based health services and the disparity in access that exists in Hyde Park. As we equitably recover from the COVID-19 pandemic, a commitment to improving access to health and wellness services in Hyde Park is crucial.

1.3 About the Hyde Park Community Center

The Hyde Park Community Center is located on River Street in Cleary Square, which is the local main street district for Hyde Park. It is easily accessed by MBTA bus and is within walking distance of the commuter rail. There is on-street parking as well as municipal parking lots in the area.

The building is largely occupied by the Hyde Park Community Center, which is operated by the Boston Centers for Youth & Families. Additional area within the building, however, is currently vacant and is being considered for the community health center or space for other services that strengthen the health of Hyde Park. To help support the build out of this space, the City of Boston has allocated up to $2 Million in the FY22-26 Capital Plan to renovate interior spaces in order to provide neighborhood-based healthcare services.
