Project Description	The initiative combines the Early College STEM Pathway and the Life Sciences Workforce Development Initiative allotments for a singular effort. Its goal is to engage Boston workers in the life sciences and STEM industries to provide upward mobility for those who do not have a bachelor's degree. We will target lower-wage workers who need credentials as key project participants. The project needs research and staffing so that employers and training programs can be identified and invited to participate in the consortium. As a result, the department retained a consultant to lead the process of inviting and identifying consortium members. A significant portion of the funding will consist of grants to organizations providing trainings to residents without the education for life science/STEM-related jobs. To recruit likely training partners that will offer such trainings to residents with an interest in the field, the department has drafted an RFP soliciting needed services. Selected RFP respondents must be prepared to offer trainings that are a 'bridge' to life science and STEM living-wage jobs.

Project Description	The project funds place-based activations around the City for artists, cultural workers, and communities. Activities include City-produced & contracted events in target areas that further City policy goals and initiatives such as reanimating downtown, creating a sense of community connection to new infrastructure investments like those along Blue Hill Ave, or working with Main Streets. This would also support and expand existing programs that work to reduce barriers and expand opportunities for Boston residents to be active citizens in their communities like the Love Your Block program. This work cuts across many departments including MOAC, ONS, Streets, Tourism, MONUM, & Small Business. While Boston aims to activate spaces in all of our neighborhoods, the City is also seeking to ensure its Downtown core is flourishing. In addition, the City Hall Plaza renovation presents a unique opportunity for the City to contract with local businesses, artists, events, and cultural organizations, ensure a space for civic engagement, & host programs that prioritize Boston's many intersectional BIPOC communities. This project also funds an RFP for a Consultant for Research and Evaluation of Equity and Impact in Arts Funding to assess MOAC's grant programs, including the activations described above, with a focus on how well the programs meet their intended goals and serve their recipients, identifying broad challenges and barriers in the local arts funding landscape.

Project Description	One of the key drivers of generational wealth creation is through entrepreneurship and business ownership. Therefore, the Mayor's Office of Economic Opportunity & Inclusion seeks to grow and sustain employer firms owned by people of color in all sectors, with a particular focus on emerging industries as well as sectors that have little to no participation in the City's procurement. These businesses often encounter difficulties accessing financial capital, business resources, and acquiring the knowledge necessary to effectively bid for and compete in government, private and institutional contracts. The Supplying Capital And Leveraging Education (SCALE) business accelerator program will provide access to business development tools, industry-specific technical assistance, and financial capital for small, diverse businesses, helping them effectively scale to meet the demands of performing larger public contracts in specific industry categories. The SCALE program will assist a cohort of small, diverse businesses - selected through a competitive process - in specific industry categories through general business development tools and consulting, industry-specific technical assistance, and additional access to capital opportunities.

Project Description	This program incentivises new leases into vacant storefronts by providing business owners with a grant for starting or expanding their physical locations in Boston. The beneficiaries of this pilot program are small businesses that have been identified as suffering disproportionate impacts from the COVID-19 pandemic per the guidelines in the Final Rule. This includes small businesses (25 or fewer employees) based in Qualified Census Tracts (QCTs) and small businesses in the following classes of business: food service and production; childcare; repair & maintenance services; laundry services; art, entertainment, and creative economy; and fitness & recreation. Funding these categories of small businesses will ensure requested ARPA funds are used to ameliorate the disproportionately negative impact that the pandemic has had on important small businesses across the City of Boston. Moreover, we aim to outreach to small businesses that have traditionally been underrepresented in high commercial areas. Whereas evidence demonstrates more diverse commercial areas are also correlated with higher overall commercial traffic and sales, redressing continuing and historic inequities will also generate broad public benefits and advance the cabinet's mission of promoting prosperity for all.

Project Description	Chinatown is an environmental justice (EJ), low income community that suffers disproportionate environmental impacts and which also suffered a disproportionate economic impact from the pandemic. Chinatown is also the city of Boston's worst heat island and a flood threatened zone. The purpose of this project is to increase community resilience in the face of climate impacts, ensure that energy efficiency and savings accrue to impacted residents, and create local democratic control, to benefit and stabilize the Boston Chinatown community, particularly its vulnerable and underserved working class, immigrant residents. The project aims to fund unsubsidized pre-weatherization gaps and fossil fuel conversion or electric upgrades as a precursor to installing Air Source Heat Pumps, Induction Stoves, and Solar and Battery Storage in historic row house properties owned by the Chinatown Community Land Trust (CCLT). Another aspect of the project is to support climate resilience through redesign of Reggie Wong Memorial Park with a focus on heat and flooding mitigation. Current Period Expenditures	$294,369.36
Project Description	Boston is poised to become the country's foremost biking city by dramatically expanding the appeal and accessibility of bicycling through critical investments in safety and connectivity. Our primary focus is a critical, one-time investment in working with residents at the neighborhood scale to plan and design connected networks of bike routes. Together, we co-create design plans that close gaps in the existing network and add new low-stress routes for people of all ages. These networks will connect homes with health centers, parks, schools, and local business districts; construct accessible pedestrian routes; and calm traffic to benefit all users. While infrastructure investments will have the greatest impact on increasing the number of people biking in Boston, we recognize there is an age and ability imbalance among everyday bicyclists that requires a targeted investment. This one-time funding provides a unique opportunity to increase biking rates among Boston's older adults and/or residents with disabilities. We will create a limited-time subsidy program for qualifying residents to purchase electric-assist bikes ("e-bikes"). E-bikes have been proven nationally to increase rates of cycling among older adults and people with mobility disabilities. This will be a proof of concept investment, accompanied by research to understand the impacts of e-bikes on everyday bicycling among these populations within Boston.

Project Description	Over the past few years, the demand for programming focused on older adults has grown. Without a strong citywide senior center network, programming varies significantly by neighborhood and target population. This project aims to create new programming where it doesn't currently exist and expand it where it is lacking, thus promoting equitable and diverse programming that meets community needs. To shape the program, gathered input from older adults and community partners. Based on their feedback, coordinated internal programming with the goal of equitable expansion and increased engagement. By launching 15 new weekly classes in nine neighborhoods and continuing existing ones, we strive to ensure that all older adults have access to quality programming, enhancing their well-being and social connections.

Sites will be continuously evaluated to ensure they continue to meet the goal of equitable representation of Boston's population. In February 2024, psychoactive substances were added to this monitoring program to observe patterns in substance use behavior in Boston and its intersection with populations disproportionately impacted by respiratory viruses. In June 2024, the monitoring of psychoactive substances concluded. In August 2024, wastewater testing was switched from the original vendor, Biobot, to a new vendor, Ginkgo Bioworks. In August 2024, BPHC presented the implementation of the program to CDC NCEZID leadership during a site visit. BPHC also presented the results of the psychoactive substance pilot testing during the CDC-WEF Wastewater Infectious Disease Surveillance Summit in Atlanta.

Project Description	IDB supported the provision of HIV services across the care continuum through multiple funding streams including: CoB, RWHAP, EHE. The three priority populations for the Boston Eligible Metropolitan Area (EMA): was 1) heterosexual women of color; 2) persons who inject drugs (PWID) and 3) MSM (men who have sex with men) of color. Within these groups, there is need to expand HIV care affecting our immigrant communities (non-US born individuals), transgender individuals, & youth (20-44 years). These priority populations underscore a critical need to ensure an equity lens to planning and implementation of HIV services. The changing landscape of public health in Boston presents an opportunity for BPHC to conduct more nuanced and comprehensive assessments of the state of HIV in Boston, specifically with a focus on understanding key risk factors for HIV transmission, how we prioritize equity in our current approach, and the gaps in HIV prevention and treatment. This assessment will allow BPHC to understand the current unmet needs more fully in addressing HIV in Boston, review how internal & external resources are aligned & distributed for maximum benefit.

Project Description	The Childcare Sector, already a low-paying sector before the pandemic, has a severe workforce shortage after the COVID-19 pandemic. This workforce shortage limits childcare programs' ability to serve the number of children they are licensed to care for. To incentivize hiring, the Mayor's Office of Women's Advancement provided direct grants to childcare businesses in the City that have hired new childcare staff (or rehired previously laid-off staff) since July 1, 2021. The grant was for the Family Child Care providers to reimburse themselves or as a bonus for the employees they hired or re-hired. The intended outcomes of this program was to draw qualified caregivers back into the childcare workforce with better pay, help childcare workers remain in the field with augmented pay, and help childcare businesses retain their workers with annual bonuses, and to avoid more FCCs from permanently closing.

Project Description	This project included training and grants for Family Child Care (FCC) businesses. FCCs are small businesses that offer childcare in the provider's home. This project focused on training these small business owners in technology and marketing and conducting developmental screenings. The training took place in cohorts of 30 or fewer participants and was intended to enhance the provider's skill in the training area while also providing the provider with a community of similarly situated entrepreneurs to support them. Entrepreneurs in the technology and marketing workshop cohort received a Chromebook or laptop and a grant in order to support their efforts to expand their childcare businesses. MOWA issued RFPs for these workshops in early 2022, with workshop cohorts taking place over the following two years. The intended outcome of this program is to 1) improve FCC marketing and technology skills to help 50 Boston childcare providers serve more children and 2) teach 165 FCC providers how to conduct developmental screenings and follow up with families if additional intervention is warranted.

Project Description	This program increased growing spaces for low-income households of color. In Boston, there were no more spaces available for residents to participate in community gardens and the waiting list is years long for most. During the Food Access Assessment, we heard low-income residents asking for available space to grow their own food, especially ethnic vegetables that are difficult to locate in the local markets. This initiative also sought to create space that helps growers cope with stress, create links between neighbors, and pass farming and cooking knowledge between generations. We partnered with local Boston farmers to build and install raised beds, and provide supplies to low-income households in Boston including all BHA locations and the Boston Public Schools. The program also funded farmers and community-based organizations to provide technical assistance, conduct gardening workshops, and distribute CSA boxes to low-income, elderly, and/or disabled Boston residents, prioritizing neighborhoods disproportionately impacted by COVID-19 and food insecurity.

As our most immediate tool to stem resident displacement, AOP has brought over 600 units onto the City's income-restricted inventory. This program is essential to support mission-oriented developers to compete in Boston's high cost market, where affordable housing buyers often see gaps upwards of $100,000 per unit to maintain affordability, and are often competing with cash offers for condo conversions.

Our intent is to support the Boston community's recovery from the COVID-19 pandemic and to connect unemployed and underemployed residents to quality employment opportunities in the green jobs sector. This includes both grantmaking for external organizations that are training and connecting residents to green jobs, and building further pathways for green jobs with the City of Boston's workforce (e.g., horticulture and tree maintenance, green stormwater infrastructure, building management). We also intend to conduct targeted outreach to improve the efficacy of programs to conduct green jobs training and hire residents into green job opportunities. This activation series will celebrate living traditions across Turtle Island (North America), restore and revisit historical narratives, highlight the diversity of Native nations, cultures, and arts; and empower people to join together in seeking collective liberation.
