Suffolk County Conservation District

Where Cities Grow With Nature

Help Bring Back the Suffolk County Conservation District

 Join your friends and neighbors to support local growers, protect Suffolk County's land and waterways, and strengthen conservation and sustainability across our neighborhoods, parks and shoreline.

 Learn how Conservation Districts work with municipalities, community organizations and residents to conserve soil, water, urban green spaces and wildlife - while supporting climate resilience, local food systems and healthy communities.

 Without an active Board, available funding for conservation and urban agriculture in Suffolk County remains unused—your participation can change that.

Join the Board of Supervisors of the Suffolk County Conservation District—for our neighborhoods and harbors, our parks and rivers, and the future of Suffolk County's natural and working landscapes.
