

Joliné Brito

Born from an island rich in beauty and burdened by truth, Joliné Brito is an Afro-Dominican spoken word poet and pre-law student at Northeastern University. The oldest daughter of immigrant parents, she grew up learning that silence was survival, but poetry became her rebellion. On stages like TEDx Roxbury, MIT, 617Peak, and Mayor Wu's campaign, Joliné shares stories of resistance; unpacking racism, sexism, immigration, and the generational wounds carried in Black and Latinx communities. Every poem is a protest. Every word, a tribute to those who came before and those still fighting to be heard.
