On the Cover:
Our cover star this month is Nicholas “Jerry” Leonard, 83 years old, from the West End. Jerry is a Senior Greeter and loves Boston City Hall. “Senior Greeters at the front of City Hall are not just pretty faces,” he says. “We’re respected. We can answer 99% of questions from visitors. We welcome tourists. I sit up front and see people come into the building in awe of the height and magnitude of the building.” Interested in becoming a Senior Greeter or other opportunities with Boston City Hall? From the Mayor's Desk

Historic preservation is at the heart of Boston’s identity.

Historic places protect our sense of identity as a city. Boston is filled with resiliency and character. That is something that we inherited from history, and something that we can see in our streets, buildings, and parks.

Preservation is about cherishing and protecting what is best in our city—in our environment and in our character. Older buildings are often very sustainable. There are other reasons, too, that we treasure our historic legacy. Most Bostonians live in 19th and early 20th century neighborhoods. Everyone sees value in protecting and preserving their homes and their streets.

The many projects that take place at our historic districts and landmarks are high-quality, high-investment projects that support Boston’s economy. They bring capital into our neighborhoods and they create good jobs. Historic preservation plays a big role in the Main Street districts that promote neighborhood development and quality of life. And it’s not just about buildings. Boston’s historic open spaces, from the Boston Common to Franklin Park, give us places to gather with our families and enjoy nature.

In Boston, we're just as proud of our past as we are excited for our future. We balance historic preservation with forward-thinking development, especially as it relates to climate preparedness. In the Seaport, a historic Wharf building is being retrofitted for General Electric’s campus.

As we plan for the future, we keep our history front and center. The preservation of our historic places is essential to our goals for having a vibrant, 21st-century city.

Sincerely,

-Mayor Martin J Walsh

It’s Older Americans Month.

Thrilled that you’re old enough to celebrate? You should be!

By Kathleen O’Connor

We’re going to look in the mirror, smile back and consult three allies who reflect openly and supportively on challenges of aging. Enter Angeles Arrien (The Second Half of Life: Opening the Eight Gates of Wisdom); Andrew Weil (Healthy Aging: A Lifelong Guide to Your Physical and Spiritual Well-Being); and Rabbi Zalman Schacter-Salumi (From Age-ing to Sage-ing: A Revolutionary Approach to Growing Older).

Increasingly apprehensive about old age, Reb Zalman tackled his fears. This book shares his journey to turn aging into meaning — his questions, his approach, how he dealt with the unknown, and the wonderful place his quest led him.

Arrien draws on imagery, archetype and myth. Give it a try and you’ll find wonderful perspective: “If we truly understand what is required of us at this stage (of life), we are blessed with enormous opportunity to develop and embody wisdom and character.”

Though aging may not be reversible, Weil offers ways to avert conditions that hamper living and prolong well-being into older years. You’ll also find insightful background on how the body ages and a thought-provoking appraisal of anti-aging products.

What is a stroke? A stroke occurs when a blood vessel, which carries oxygen to the brain, is blocked by a clot, or bursts. When this happens, the brain is deprived of oxygen, and its cells and tissues begin to die.

Types of stroke:
- Ischemic strokes - caused by a clot.
- Hemorrhagic stroke - caused when a weakened blood vessel bursts and bleeds into the brain, compressing the surrounding tissue.
- TIA (transient ischemic attacks) are also known as “mini-strokes”, and are caused by temporary clots.

Signs and symptoms include sudden:
- Numbness or weakness of the face, arm or leg, especially on one side of the body
- Confusion, trouble speaking or understanding
- Trouble seeing or blurred vision in one or both eyes
- Trouble walking, dizziness, loss of balance or coordination
- Severe headache with no known cause

Facts:
- Every year, over 795,000 people in the U.S. have a stroke.
- While stroke risk increases with age, 34% of people hospitalized for strokes were under the age of 65.
- Strokes are the leading cause of long-term disability.
- High blood pressure is the number-one cause of stroke. Try to maintain a healthy blood pressure of 120/80.
- High cholesterol causes plaque buildup in the arteries and blood vessels, which can block blood flow to the brain and cause strokes.

Did you know?

Someone has a stroke every 40 seconds in the U.S.

For more information and resources on stroke awareness go to:
- American Stroke Association: www.strokeassociation.org
- Boston Public Health Commission: www.bphc.org

Prevention Tips:
- Don't smoke. Smoking doubles the risk of strokes.
- Eat a healthy diet that is low in saturated and trans fat, added sugars, and sodium.
- Engage in physical activity every day.
Walk into the Sportsmen’s Tennis and Enrichment Center on a Sunday afternoon, and the first thing you’ll notice is the Motown, with icons Barry Moody and The Temptations crooning over the loudspeakers. The occasion? The weekly meeting of the Boston Police Tennis Club. In case the music didn’t tip you off, this isn’t your average tennis club. Comprised of Southie Seniors, ladies ranging from 67 to 92 years old, members gather each week under the guidance of Officer Frank Williams, Jr.

Williams created the tennis club following the success of his Volley Against Violence and Boston Youth Tennis Programs, which have been running for nine years, and encourage positive decision making and skill building.

So why tennis? Williams’ love of the sport had been lifelong, inherited from his father, whom he lovingly refers to as “the King.” An immigrant from the Dominican Republic, Williams’ father worked as a janitor at MIT, and it was there, on those campus courts, that he handed his son a racquet for the first time.

As a member of the force, Williams was looking for opportunities to enrich the communities he was already serving. With “the blessing” of his Chief, Williams created his youth programs. As they grew and gained support within the community, Williams expanded his sights, looking to other underserved communities in Southie. It was at this point that he met Carole Sullivan, the Director of Senior Programs at the South Boston Neighborhood House, which has been providing resources and programs for Bostonians of all ages, since 1903.

With gear, music, and cadets in tow, Williams started his senior tennis program at the Neighborhood house. The class expanded from five to over twenty participants, and had to move to Sportsmen’s, a venue large enough to accommodate the growing interest. His classes are structured around inclusivity, accommodating participants who bring canes and walkers. These ladies, whom Williams fondly refers to as “seasoned, recycled teenagers”, dance along to the music, work on their hand-eye coordination, and socialize.

As Carole Sullivan aptly put it “There’s such a stigma for older gals and guys - that they should be sitting around playing bingo. That’s not how they want to be portrayed, that’s not how they want to be recognized. This opens up a path that they, friends, and family would never believe. Someone gave them an opportunity, and they took it. Now they’re proud and walking a little taller.”

Williams’ work and enthusiasm has been so successful, his curriculum was adopted by Serve & Connect, a non-profit geared toward creating transformative police-community partnerships. He has also gone on to create tennis programs in Barbados, Cape Verde, Cuba, and the Dominican Republic.

When asked about the future of these programs, Williams said “The goal is to expand to more areas of the city. To Dorchester, Mattapan, etc. We’re having a good time, and we need to give back. There are three things you need in life: someone to love, something to do, and something to look forward to. If we can be that thing that people are looking forward to, that would be incredible.”

Trinity Church
Located in Back Bay, Trinity Church was constructed from 1872-1877, and became the birthplace of the Richardson Romanesque architectural style. It is currently under study to become a Boston Landmark.

What makes a place? The people, energy, and architecture all play a role. But places have meaning because they hold the stories of the past and the promises of the future.

In Boston, you cannot go far without stumbling upon a bit of history. So much of the character of a place is in its buildings and parks, which become the backdrop of our lives in the city. In honor of National Preservation Month, learn more about some of Boston’s landmarks and rediscover the beauty, history, and charm of our city.

-Your Editors
It's National Preservation Month: Celebrating our Landmarks

Established by the National Trust for Historic Preservation, this month-long observance is celebrated across the country by highlighting the historic places and cultural resources that have endured the test of time and enhance our lives. In Boston, Preservation Month is led by the Boston Landmarks Commission (BLC).

Each year, BLC celebrates Preservation Month by creating a calendar of local events that helps promote the work of BLC and Boston organizations to preserve the history and architecture in neighborhoods across the city. As one of America’s oldest cities, Boston has been at the forefront of the development of the nation. There are more than 8,000 properties designated as individual Boston Landmarks located within the City’s nine historic districts. The BLC is the municipal preservation agency for the City of Boston’s historic buildings, districts, structures, objects, neighborhoods and archaeological resources.

These are the buildings, structures, sites, and areas that inform us about the people that have lived and worked in Boston and the events that have shaped the city from its beginning to the present. The BLC and the local Historic District Commissions, along with the Boston City Archaeology Program, help keep Boston, Boston.

Boston City Hall Celebrates 50 Years

More than 50 years ago, after receiving 256 entries in response to an international design competition for a new City Hall, the City chose a design by an unknown architectural firm, Kallmann, McKinnell, and Knowles. The intent of the design was to show an open and progressive city government. The building was completed in 1967.

The concrete modernist style accentuates the building’s floor-to-ceiling windows, skylights, and grand staircase. In addition to galleries that highlight local Boston artists, the building also offers vistas of Faneuil Hall and Quincy Market.

Getty Foundation Grant

Boston has received a 2017 “Keep It Modern” grant from the Getty Foundation, to fund a conservation plan for our iconic City Hall building, recognized as outstanding 20th century architectural feat.

“I love architecture. I have a love affair with buildings. I remember City Hall being built. The map room is the highlight of the building for me. Every single building is in a scale model. Architecturally, Boston City Hall is one of a kind in the world. This is a “wow” building. It’s a semi-wonder. The brutalism, though not loved, is fascinating. It’s not all over the world. You’re not going to go to Paris and see something like this. America, especially New England, has its own beauty.”

Wyse says Goodbye to Readers after 30 years

Dear Healthy, Wealthy and Wyse Readers,

After thirty years of writing for Boston Seniority, I have decided to retire my column. I enjoyed writing about medical issues, medications, future trends in medicine and issues and concerns specific to seniors. I thank you for your comments, recommendations and suggestions.

I especially want to thank my friends and colleagues in the Elderly Commission. In 1984, I transferred from Boston City Hospital to work at City Hall. The staff at the Elderly Commission welcomed me to their team immediately. They introduced me to issues that were important to Boston seniors. I enjoyed their senior trips and boat rides, consulted on the original Seniors Count Program, and was a guest on programs. They introduced me to our dear friend, Dorothy Curran’s Wednesday Evening Concerts on the Plaza.

I often walked through the Elderly Commission on my way to pick up my mail. The staff was always busy but they found time to say hello and give me updates on events and department news.

I am very grateful for knowing and working with such a delightful group of people. To our Boston seniors and Elderly Commission staff, I wish each of you good health, happiness and good fortune in the days ahead.

Warmest wishes,
Geraldine C. Wyse, RN
